ROSBY S. NOYES ...... Editor. THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation much more than the combined circulation of the other Washington dailles. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

17In order to avoid delays, on account of personal absence, letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editorial or Business Departments, according to tenor or purpose.

Most conspicuous among the products of the so-called Indian troubles in northwestern Wyoming are the scouts who never scouted and Indian fighters who, in barroom visions, have massacred countless hosts of the unfortunate red men. These frontier characters now occupy a large share of public attention in those places where they are not known, and corre spondents who are of the "tenderfoot" variety are mainly responsible for the wide circulation which has been given the maudlin views of those whose bloodiest lynching parties. The sanguinary stories uncorked by these Wyoming and Idaho heroes to the contrary notwithstanding, it may safely be asserted that there has not during the past month been any likelihood of an Indian war. The grain and the chaff being separated, there does not exist any testimony that shows hostility on the part of the Bannacks. Of rumors of wholesale slaughter by the Indians there has been no lack, but time, which always brings the truth to the surface, fails to produce even the flimslest of support for the allegations which a little while ago were being so freely made, originally in frontier ginmills. Careful investigation shows conclu sively that no white man, woman or child has been slain by the Bannacks who are alleged to be on the war-nath. But several Indians have been killed, and it is of record that they were shot down in a man ner so cowardly that Wyoming will have something to be ashamed of for quite a while to come. Condensation of the state ments made by white men-for no word has yet been received from the Bannacks themselves-shows conclusively that the disturbance was caused by the interference of settlers who believed the state law to be superior to the treaty made between the United States and the Indians and who, when the captured Bannacks en deavored to escape, fired upon them without justification and killed nearly all of those who were, under the terms of the treaty, doing what they had a right to do, but who, according to the Wyoming game laws, were guilty merely of a misde reveal conditions much more serious than any that are now believed to exist, but ery present indication points to the probability that the dwellers in the disturbed region from Market Lake to the southern boundary of the Yellowstone Park and as far east as the Indian-hating community of Lander are playing the same old game which has been worked so successfully in times gone by. Nothing stimulates business more in some portions of the west than an imitation Indian campaign; even a real campaign is productive of financial improvement. Wherever any considerable body of troops is in motion, large sums of money are being disbursed; for there must be supplies for the soldier and the soldier's horse, and there is demand by quartermasters for teams and teamsters That the salcon-keepers and gambling sharks, and the population generally from Market Lake to Marysville, are looking forward to a season of prosperity is evident from a dispatch which arrived east last night, and in which it was said:

It may be that later developments will

"A very bitter feeling exists against the Indians among the whites, and it will be Indians among the whites, and it will be necessary to retain troops in the region for some time to prevent further trouble, unless the Indians are absolutely forbidden to come into the region. The Indians, too, are very angry over the killing of their people, and it is feared will await a favorable opportunity to make a raid on the settlements, to be revenged."

The most reliable reports yet received are to the effect that the number of male Indians in Hoback Canon does not exceed seventy-five, and it is pure surmise to imagine that they have prepared them-selves in any way for offensive operations. Rumor says that the Indians have fortified themselves in an impregnable position, but it is only rumor; not one of the many valiant scouts and Indian-fighters who have been riding recklessly up and down in the newspapers has cared to hold converse with the little hunting party that has assumed dimensions sufficiently great to call for the expedition which Gen. Coppinger has organized. There would not have been any trouble at all had there been no clash of authority between the state and the general government. It is history that white men have been responsible for every Indian disturbance this country has ever known; history is now repeating itself.

Sound economy is a most desirable feature either in personal or govermental affairs, and so far as it was a truly economical motive by which the District Commis eloners have been moved to insist that water-meters shall be used by large consumers of the Potomac fluid there can be no ground upon which to base complaint of the action. Yet there exists a suspicion that the step officially taken yesterday is in the wrong direction; that it is a stride toward the installation throughout the whole city of a system of water measurement which, if it ever comes into existence, will be most harmful to the health of the community. It is, of course, proper that those persons or corporations who use vast quantitles of the liquid for purely commercial purposes should pay a tax commen surate with the privilege enjoyed, but there the meter-system should stop. It is possible that the Commissioners hope to locate the waste of water which evidently is going on: if that be the object, then water-meters should be placed in all of the government departments: the measuring mechanism would prove beyond any possibility of doubt that waste in the department buildings is incomparably greater than in any of the manufacturing establishments, or hotels, or livery stables, in the city.

Governor Culberson of Texas has officially disapproved of the prize fight which was to take place in that state. The great difficulty, however, seems to be in having official disapprovals taken in carnest.

It is alleged that silver is "holding its own." It is also alleged that "its own" dces not amount to a great deal.

With marvelous assurance, and yet with supporting statements that may carry conviction to some minds, Dr. Paul Brisson of Paris claims to have discovered the microbe of old age. This minute mischief. says the doctor, exists only in the blood of old and decrepit men, but when injected into the circulation of a young and healthy individual it straightway produces all the signs of advanced age. If this be really so, then Dr. Brisson's discovery is truly wonderful; less wonderful, however, than the further announcement made by the doctor that he knows of a certain serum, which, if introduced into the blood, destroys the microbe of old age and thus makes possible indefinite extension of human life. It is the duty of a civilized people to encourage original investigation, and it may safely be alleged that the present generation has done all that could be required of it in promoting those things which promise to ameliorate conditions that have caused and that still cause the human race more or less of serious concern. Without much hesitation society has accepted a great many theories as to microbes and bacilli and bacteria, and in a large number of cases there has been earnest endeavor on the part of the layman to readjust his standards of life so that they might accord with the newly-developed and frequently astounding theories. It is certain that the germs of deadly disease have been captured and identified beyond question, and there have been discovered antagonistic germs ready to do battle in behalf of diminished human suffering and extended human existence. But when it is seriously insisted that the microbe of old age has been caught and tagged, and that a pugnacious organism is only awaiting an opportunity to chase it out of the human system, so that, barring accident, mankind may live forever, a few thinking people will really have to be excused if they say frankly that they don't believe it. Perhaps, at some time in the near future. these unbelievers may have to apologize for their present unbelief-they will doubtless be glad to do so if there is good reason for their apology-but just now they do not concede to Dr. Brisson the discovery of eternal life on earth.

This is the time for dwellers in the towns and villages through which the Washington and Baltimore electric road will pass to insist upon corporate consideration for the rights of the public. It should be understood that this road will not be a street railroad; it will be an electrically-operated competitor with the steam roads, and, in order that its competition may be profitable, it will have to run large, heavy cars at steam-railroad rates of speed. The same requirements concerning speed on urban thoroughfares-non-infringement on the public highways, and protection of life at grade-crossings, should be imposed upon it that are viewed as necessary in dealing with a steam railway. This electric road will undoubtedly confer great benefits upon the section traversed by it, but that is no reason why in the public interest and for the public protection the same safeguards should not be exacted from it that are required from roads operated by steam.

The esteemed Post's statement that the Washington and Georgetown Railway Company had absorbed the Rock Creek road, which was denied, not by The Star, but emphatically and specifically by President Dunlop and other officials of the two corporations, is not, as the Post pretends to think, the same statement that was published in yesterday's Star concerning the negotiations, plans and prospects of the two railways. That there was something under way affecting the relations of these roads and affecting the general policy of the Washington and Georgetown railway as to extensions has been for some time the text of speculative gossip, but the public secured its first full and accurate knowledge of the facts in the case through the Star, where it is accustomed to find such things first.

Ninety-two men were employed today on the city post-office building; three years, five months and fourteen days after the work of construction commenced.

It is probable that the corn and wheat crop in the west will be big enough to exert a very depressing influence on the populist hallucination product.

Indian Agent Teter should agitate some revision of the interstate commerce law which will provide against the issue of too many passes to "Lo."

When Congress adjourns, the criminal classes appear to feel it their duty to take hold and to do their best to make things interesting.

The man who desired to be interviewed as a leading statesman is advised to seize the present golden opportunity and avoid the rush.

London's agitation in scientific circles of an excursion to the pole has at least the merit of being timely.

for good measure." The Two Dioceses.

From the Maryland Churchman for August.

The bishop has made known to the depu-The bishop has made known to the deputies of Maryland for the general convention his consent to the setting off of a new diocese, to be called the diocese of Washington. This official consent was made necessary by the laws of the church. It remains now only to receive the approval of the general convention, which will no doubt be given very early after the assembling in October. As soon as that shall have been declared the bishop will call, at the month's notice, the primary convention have been declared the bishop will call, at cre month's notice, the primary convention for the organizing of the new diocese, and cn such notice he will probably make known his own decision as to the diocese which is to be his own field for work. It will be a very difficult and painful step for him to take. His way does not seem clear now; and he earnestly asks the prayers of the clergy and require that he may be of the clergy and people that he may be led to the path which shall be best for the church and the work.

A Suggestion to Boston.

From the Somerville Journal. Why should all the Boston papers call them "Knights Templars," by the way? "Knights Templar" is only Templar Krights" turned around. No "s" is required to indicate the plural of an adjective.
